The Righteous Revenge of Lady Revena

Someday somebody will write a history of Revenge. It will show how kingdoms were destroyed for the sake of revenge; how people suffered for revenge; and also how foolish it has been. Such a book would have to be written by a combination of historians, psychologists, anthropologists and other specialists. This story of revenge is unique as you will see. It took place in the last quarter of the nineteenth century in Old England.

The Lady Revena had been married five years to Lord Smogfield. Who was a gambler, a liar, a cheat, and anything else you want to add to the list. She knew that her time was not long on this earth. And that when she was no more, her husband would find another rich heiress. And go through her fortune also. She went to see John Galaway, the famous painter.

"You will paint me," she told him, "Exactly as I direct you. Make me youthful and charming. When finished I will tell you what to add to the picture."

It took only eight sittings for the great artist to finish the picture.

"It will be my gift to the town hall," she explained. "It will be hung in the great hall. Now on every finger paint a large diamond ring. Around my neck add a string of large pearls. And on my head put a comb of brilliant diamonds."

"It will be done, My Lady," said the painter. "But I am just a bit curious. Why these additions?"

"My revenge," she grinned. "Imagine how angry the next wife of my husband will be when he can't explain where all these valuables are?"

Cured

My Uncle Teddy has reached the sixty year mark. And his wife, Ethel is only two years behind him. They are the perfect ideal couple. All her faults are of the normal variety. One that she has can get on your nerves. When you visit her or she visits you, she wants to know if you have seen a certain movie or TV show. If you haven't, she then proceeds to give you a minute by minute perfect description of every scene. You are her captive audience. She doesn't care at all that you didn't want to see it in the first place. But now she is cured. How?

We were invited to a special party out in the suburbs. The friendly kind where introductions are made only with the first name. Half hour after the party started, Aunt Ethel went into her act.

"Have you seen the new picture called, "Hearts for Ransom"? "So wonderful I could see it again and again. Now I will tell you about it."

"You will just shut up right now," shouted a powerful voice. "You will not tell any person here a single thing about that picture."

"Give me one good reason why I can't exercise my right of speech under the federal Constitution," demanded my Aunt Ethel. "Go ahead, I dare you."

"You are a most persistent woman," sighed the man. "I happen to be Frank Caprella who directed the picture. And what is the surprise we have for all of you? Lights out! You are going to see my masterpiece entitled, "Hearts For Ransom."

A Matter of Food

When the wife and myself go to the country, we like a table just for us two. We are sociable people and considered good mixers. But when you sit at a large table with six or eight other people, your enjoyment of the food often depends upon the actions of some of these people.

Now there's the type of woman who just doesn't like anything served to her. She sends back the chicken because it isn't cooked enough. Then she orders roast beef. It is roasted too much! So back it goes. Next she asks for a veal cutlet. When it comes she takes one bite. And tells the waiter to take it back because she knows it really isn't veal.

One look at the waiter's face and you know he is wondering whether or not it is worthwhile to commit homicide. Rid the world of one big useless complainer. Furthermore he knows the type. For all the service rendered he will only get a small tip.

So we sat at the big table with one of these women. She watched me eat everything brought to me. Not one word of complaint came from my lips.

"You seem to enjoy everything," she said sarcastically. "I wonder why?"

She walked right into the trap. I was ready for her with my reply.

"When you have been as I have in the jungle for eight days without food, something happens to you. You are willing to eat anything—," and I gave her one big stare, "and also anyone!"

That did the trick. She changed from then on for the better.
